Design Learning

Designing is the process of envisioning and planning the creation of objects, interactive systems, buildings, vehicles, etc. It can be categorized as a fancy sounding word, and there seem to be a certain amount of misconceptions surrounding it. But what is it really at its core? Is it simply a process of making pretty looking things? We'd say it is far from it. It doesn't focus purely on aesthetics, nor is it about adding ornaments to an item. First and foremost, it is about making room for the user's interaction with the environment in an attempt to make it more complete.

Why attend?

Design education can strengthen and widen perceptions, observations, critical thinking, problem-solving and people skills. It includes investigations, explorations, evaluations, inventions and the ability to understand, develop, and visually communicate systems, processes and environments.
